

Project Management Training

Make better business decisions around your project portfolio

In a competitive business climate, an organization's ability to efficiently align resources and business activities with strategic objectives can mean the difference between succeeding and just surviving. To achieve strategic alignment, organizations are increasingly managing their activities and processes as projects — in essence, projectizing their business — to monitor performance more closely and make better business decisions about their project portfolio.

Did You Know...

- 74% of all projects fail, come in over budget or run past the original deadline
- 90% of major IT project initiatives fail to be completed on time and on budget
- Every year $75 billion dollars is spent on failed projects

Benefits of Project Management Training

Multi-billion-dollar corporations, governments, and smaller organizations alike face challenges such as a rapid rate of change, the need for fast deployment of new technology and an unusually high level of skills shortage. Strategic initiatives to address these challenges are increasingly being driven through projects. Making your strategic goals a reality requires proper training, so your organization can gain visibility, insight, and control its portfolio of projects, as well as improve productivity, reduce cycle times, decrease costs, and increase quality.

The New Horizons Project Management Solution

All organizations need to meet project deadlines on time and within budget, as well as meet stakeholder expectations. New Horizons Project Management training program is designed to train staff on how to effectively manage current projects, and provide them with the knowledge to continually identify and prioritize projects that align with your corporate strategy.

Some of the Ways New Horizons Project Management Training Can Help Your Business:

- Forecast costs and expenses for a more accurate bottom line outcome
- Track schedules, resources and budgets to meet project goals
- Identify potential problems early to keep costs low
- Effectively assign and manage staff to maximize resources
- Standardize best practices for greater efficiency

Who will Benefit from Project Management Training?

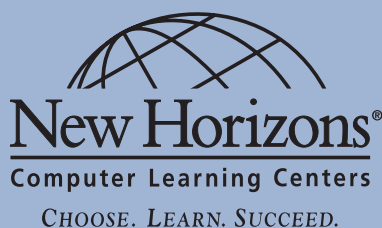

Regardless of the industry, project management is a necessary component of successful organizations. Every member of the organization has assignments that must be completed within certain time constraints and with limited resources. Fundamentally, every employee manages some type of project.

Our students include project managers, team leaders, project associates, project schedulers, office managers, system managers, application developers, implementation teams, LAN managers, programmers, webmasters, analysts, IT managers, human resources specialists, administrative, office and marketing staff.

Project Management Training Benefits:

- Reduce tasks and decrease risks on projects
- Manage projects more efficiently and effectively
- Complete projects on time and within budget
- Increase customer satisfaction
- Maximize ROI
